It is much to be regretted that those laggards and sponges who only wish to live off their country, would get clear off the country before they stopped. We are cursed with a set of imbeciles and blood suckers : grovelling creatures who care not if the nation perishes, so they can lay up a few dollars.

LIFE TENANTS OF THE ASTOR LIBRARY.

"Neither the war nor the weather, nor any other matter of human concern, seems to have the least effect upon the habitues of the Astor Library. They may be seen there every day, occupying the same places, and evidently feeling a sort of propriearty interest in particular chairs and tables, as if they were personal be quests from the distinguished millionaire who gave his name and a good share of his wealth to this excellent institu-tion. Who these regular attendants are nobody knows. Some of them are addicted to the pursuit of pleasant and harmless hobbies. Immense and complete treatises on Conchology Ichthyolegy, Entomology, Palgeontology, and other sciences, out of which it is not possible to make any money, may be seen spread on their tables, furnishing materials for the filling up of note-books in which these singular gentlemen are constantly making entries in fine hands, with stumps of lead pencils. Or their taste runs to languages, and they are reveling in Hieroglyphics, or Sanacrit, or Arabic, or Hin-doostanee, or Cherokee, or Choctaw, or some other bothering tongue, full facilities for the cultivation of which may be had in the Aster Library. The ruling passion of these indefatigable laborers is supposed to be a love of study. Secondary to that—if they are practical enough to entertain such a business-like ideais a laudable desire to publish books which they fondly hope will be read and appreciated by a few quiet gentlemen who are absorbed in their particular hobbies, in various parts of the globe. The obstinate prejudices of the book-publishers generally prevent the realization of this cherished idea. Sometimes one sees, in magazines, articles on odd, out-of-theway subjects, which might have been "read up" for at the Astor House Libraoutsiders; for the regular bibliomaniacs would scorn to write a short popular pa-

The books which they called for were false pretences to hide the reality of thawing out their toes. It is probable that many visiters to the Library during the warm weather seek it as a shelter from the sun. Though the costly Library was not endowed, built, and supplied with books as a refuge from the cold of winter or the warm of summer, visiters of every description are welcomed and can stay as long as they behave

And although the pleasant book-worms to whom we have referred are life-tenants of the Library, it must not be supposed that there is not room enough in its ample halls for all."

It is rumored that it is not the intention of the Government to put the second quota of 300,000 into the flield at once, but that they will constitute a grand reserve force, which without leaving the respective States, will be regularly drilA Lesson from History.

The nearest historical parrallel in modern times to the present position of the United States, is that of France during the great revolution in 1793, after the execution of Louis, XVI. The Government of the Republic was harrassed with all manner of domestic difficulties, from factions, conspiracies, rebellions, and fi-nances disordered to the last degree of confusion and discredit. In the midst of these internal troubles, war was declared against France, not by England alone, but by Austria, Prussia, Holland, Spain, Portugal, Sardinia, Naples, the Pope, and several of the German Principalities-in all thirty States, great and small, the greatest being the chief powers of Europe and the world.

They took the field with great armies. and approached France from every point this, too, at a time when in France whole provinces and large cities like Lyons, Foulon and Orleans were in arms against the Republic, and the revolt in many places formidable and for a time success ful. To meet these various enumies, the French Convention at first called out 500,000 men. This force did not prove sufficient, and a few months later a de-cree was leved putting in permanent requisition every citizen. All the young unmarried men, or widowers without children, from the ages of eighteen to twenty-five were to compose the first levy. They were to assemble immedilevy. They were to assemble immediately in the chief towns of the districts o put themselves under drill and to b ready to start for the seems of war at ; moment's rotice. The men between twenty-five and thirty were notified to get ready, and meanwhile were required to suppress the revolt of the Vendeans and other insurgents, and to keep the peace of the inferor. The men between thirty and sixty were held in reserve for the more gradua arming of the population. In certain parts, such as the Departments adjoining La Vendee, Lyons, Toulon and the Rhine, the whole population able to bear arms was at once called out. The means employed to arm, equip, and subsist these levies, were adapted to the circumstances. The first levies produced in a month six hundred thousand men, but these were not soldiers, and for four or five months the armies of the Republic suffered a continuous series of disasters from pan-ics and want of skill in both troops and commanders. But the tide at length turned, and, the Republic not only expelled the invaders, but carried its victorious standard into the adjacent countries. What France did then, the United States can do now, if the exigencies of the case demand it.

A WHISTLING OIL WELL -- A novel incident occurred on the widow McClintock Farm on Oil Creek, one day last week. That portion of the tubing of the Van Slyke well which rous into the receiving tanks from the well, was removed, in order to make some repairs, leaving the conducter pipes still in the well. On Friday morning the inhabitants of that region were startled by the sound of a gigantic steam whistle, and found that it proceeded from this well. The gas forcing up through the pipe, had probably met with some obstruction, which caused it to perform in this way. The scream of this whistle was tremendous and could be heard several miles.
